NORWAY AND VICINITY

Boys' Natural History Club.

The members of the Boys' Natural History Club will go, weather permitting, on an expedition, Friday of this week. The plans are to go by two large teams to Paris Hill. The collection of minerals in the Memorial Building there will be examined, and then the mines at Mount Mica. By team the party will then be taken to the foot of Streaked Mountain.

The mountain will be ascended and the members will camp over night upon the summit, returning by team the next day. Leslie Rowe has been admitted to the club as expert in forestry. The party will be:

George R. Howe, Vivian Akers, Phil Richardson, Francis Danforth, Will Leavitt, Donald Bartlett, Verne Gayton, Howard Lasselle, Earle Stearns, Fred F. Swan, Leslie Rowe, George L. Noyes, Homer Tubbs, Ned Shepherd, Ronelle Bicknell, Carl Stearns, Hubert Barker, John Stearns, Rupert Mixer, Hubert Brooks, Roland Kimball.

A Practice March.

The boys of Company D had a practice march and camp, Saturday. In parties they marched to a spot near Horace Dinsmore's and practically went through the same maneuvers as they expect to be called upon to do in the war game at Portland this month.

There were twenty-two of the boys who turned out. They pitched shelter tents and kept the campfire bright. Sunday a good share of the day was devoted to the wigwag signals by flags from hill to hill. Many of the men are very proficient in sending and receiving messages.

The regular rations were served but in addition beans baked in the ground were enjoyed Sunday.

Mrs. Thomas Barber of Middlefield, Conn., and Mary Shurtleff of Oberlin, Ohio, visited Electra and Ellen F. Brown from Sunday to Tuesday this week.

H. D. Clifford and wife of Chicago are making the "grand tour" of New England. Mr. Clement is a native of New Hampshire, and a brother of the late E. N. Clement of this town. On Friday, July 31, Mr. and Mrs. Clement were guests at the summer homes of Richard E. Clement and Samuel H. Hayden on west shore of Lake Pennesseewassee.

Mrs. Hal R. Eaton entertained a party at whist, Wednesday evening, at her home on Cottage street. The parlors were delightfully arranged and the guests were most happily entertained. Three tables were played until about ten o'clock, when the guests adjourned to the dining-room which was attractively decorated and lighted by colored candles, a Welsh rarebit with accessories was served, and finally with reluctance the party broke up. Alice I. Frost was the winner of the first prize and Will Holmes of South Paris, the booby.

Mrs. Grace Gary of Las Crucis, New Mexico, is visiting relatives and friends in town. Mrs. Gary went to New Mexico for her health and at the time she went a little over a year ago her lungs were badly affected by consumption. Now she looks and appears in better health than the average of people, though she will be obliged to live the most of the time in that Southern climate. She is to return about the first of September. She brought with her two horned pet toads which are cute little fellows and a curiosity. They will catch flies with their long pointed tongues and with a string tied around their necks just back of their horns to keep them within bounds they will travel around at a rapid gait. But woe to the one who puts the string about their necks unless care is taken. Mr. Toad will do his best to prick their fingers with his sharp little horns that grow on either side of his head, and with his eyes partly closed he looks so cunning and mischievous that in spite of his being a toad you like him at once.

NUMBER 32. AUGUST 7, 1903, NORWAY AND SOUTH PARIS, MAINE. VOLUME XXXIV.

A Vacation Service.

The large audience who attended the Congregational church service, on Sunday morning, went away feeling that they had listened to a very interesting sermon preached by the former pastor, Rev. Alexander Wiswall, from the text, Ex. 15-27: "And they came to Elim where were twelve wells of water and threescore and ten palm trees, and they camped there by the waters."

In a very forceful and instructive manner Mr. Wiswall pictured out the difficulties passed through in the wilderness, how the children of Israel had thirsted for water and found them bitter at Marah, how thankful they must have been to reach Elim, to get into the cool shade of the palm trees and out of the intense heat of the sun such as is found only in the Orient, and drink of its pure, sparkling water.

The sermon was particularly interesting at this season of the year when so many have reached their Elim and are resting their bodies and minds in the cool shade of the forest, by the seashore, the lake and mountain stream. Such times come to all of us, but the command is, as to the children of Israel, to go forward, not to remain too long at Elim, but after the mind is refreshed, the body rested, to go forward to do life work, to be ready to cross the Jordan and enter the Promised Land.

Many attended the service because word had gone out that there would be special music. Those who came on account of this must have gone away perfectly satisfied, as the musical service was made doubly interesting from the fact that in the absence of the regular choir S. Maude Thompson of Philadelphia, a pupil of Wm. L. Whitney of Boston and Sig. Varmuceini of Italy, and Geo. W. Horne of Lewiston sang solos and a duet.

Mrs. H. L. Horne played for the opening voluntary from the "Stubat Mater" in her usual pleasing way. A trio, "Praise ye the Lord" by Adam Geibel, was rendered by Miss Thompson, Geo. Horne and H. L. Horne.

In place of regular hymn Miss Thompsang beautifully the solo, "Save Me, O God," by A. Randbegger, her phrasing, enunciation, and great range of voice with always a plenty of reserve, left the audience wanting more, and showed herself to be one of the greatest artists a Norway audience has listened to.

For a prayer response Mr. Horne sang "If with all your hearts ye truly seek Me," Elijah, one of the finest tenor solos ever written. Mr. Horne was in good voice and sung in his usual intelligent, pleasing way. He is no stranger to a Norway audience, and has many friends and ready listeners among the people.

The closing number was a duet for soprano and tenor, "One sweetly solemn thought comes to me o'er and o'er," by Miss Thompson and Mr. Horne. The attentive listening of the people tells the story better than we can describe it. It was grand!

Many friends of the two singers have suggested that they hope to hear them at least annually if not more often.

The Junior Union Entertainment.

A slight drizzling rain, Tuesday evening, prevented the Juniors of the Universalist Christian Union holding their supper on the lawn as was originally planned. The supper was in Concert Hall, and there was a large company sat down to eat. The supper was an excellent one, composed of salads, cold meats and a wide variety of cake and pastry. The members of the Junior Union acted as waiters.

The duet by the Hayden girls was very good. The operetta Cinderella in Flower Land, is a pretty affair and has been given before in Concert Hall. This time all the parts were taken by the girls of the Junior Union.

The operetta went off very well, and showed the effect of much care and painstaking work. There were a few incidents not just according to program, but they were cunningly done, and amused the audience very much.

Death of O. A. Kneeland.

Former Proprietor of the Beal's Hotel Passes Suddenly Away.

Orlando A. Kneeland, the well-known manager of the Hallowell House, died, Sunday morning, after only a few hours' illness, death being due to apoplexy. His age was 54 years.

Up to Saturday night, Mr. Kneeland was apparently in his usual good health and spirits, but retired early. He later complained of indigestion and a physician was called, who succeeded in affording some relief, although not rendering an improved condition. Early Sunday morning the physician was again called but human effort was unavailing, and shortly before 8 o'clock a stroke of apoplexy resulted from the acute form of indigestion, from which he suffered through the night.

The news of his death came as a great shock to his many friends. He was about the hotel and on the street as usual Saturday, and during the evening was talking sociably with guests and friends in the office.

He was a successful hotel manager and had been for some years a prominent member in the Maine Hotel Proprietors' Association. He came to the Hallowell House a few months after it was reopened about four years ago. The house had been closed for years, but he exercised his wealth of experience, adhered to strict business methods and readily placed the hotel in the front rank.

His home is at Harrison, where his mother, a brother and other near relatives reside at the beautiful homestead on the shore of Crystal lake.

The very deep sympathy of all is extended to the loving wife of the deceased, who is prostrated with grief.

Among the hotels which have been under his charge are the Beal's Hotel, Norway, the Summit Spring, Harrison, the Sebago House, Sebago, The Oxford, Fryeburg, and the Crystal Spring House, Harrison. He took charge of the Beal's Hotel, Oct. 21, 1900, and conducted the house three years. He then went to Fryeburg and took charge of The Oxford, and later went to Hallowell.

Mr. Kneeland was a member of Oriental Lodge of Masons, Bridgton, of Oxford Royal Arch Chapter and of Oxford Council R. & S. Masons.

A funeral service was held at the Hallowell House, Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. F. Livingston, rector of St. Matthew's church, officiating. There was a large gathering of friends of the deceased and the services were very impressive. The floral tributes were beautiful and included an anchor of white roses and ivy leaves from guests of the hotel, a wreath of roses, ferns and pinks from employes of the house, numerous set pieces and bouquets of cut flowers.

Services were held at 2 o'clock p. m. at Harrison on Wednesday at the residence of Mrs. Sherburn Ricker, a sister of the deceased, Rev. E Z. Whitman of the Free Baptist church of Harrison and Rev. Mr. Winn of Bridgton officiating. There was a large gathering of friends and neighbors. Masonic services were held at the grave with Rev. Luther F. McKinney as master of services. Interment was made in the family lot at Harrison.

Huge bonfires illuminated the grounds and about them gathered groups of people, who played games and otherwise thoroughly enjoyed themselves. At eleven o'clock, which came all too soon, ice cream and cake were served, and about the time when the day shaded off into the morrow the party took the steamer homeward bound, much pleased with their entertainment and very happy.

The up train was late, Wednesday afternoon, about half an hour, being a little too heavy for the locomotive. The down express crossed the local here.

A meeting of the Universalist parish is called for Tuesday, Aug. 11, at 7.30 p. m., to hear the report of the committee on soliciting pledges for the minister's salary and act on same.

There was considerable excitement at the Alpine street crossing, Saturday about noon. Three hoboes who had just come in on a freight had a triangular row. The names are unknown, but they were a big man, a little man and a medium sized man. The little man hit the big man on the head with a board, whereupon the b. m. took the l. m. by the nape of the neck and another hold and put him off the car. The l. m. hit b. m. on the nose drawing claret, and the b. m. hit the l. m. causing a sprain to his arm. The l. m. went to consult a physician while the b. m. struck out for San Francisco across the country at a rapid gait, and making explosive remarks about his nose. The m. s. m. aided and abetted the scrappers, holding the hat of the one who fled.

IMPORTANCE OF SPEED.

A GREAT FACTOR IN EVERY DAY LIFE.

In these days of rapid progress, one of the most important factors in business and science; in transportation; in sports and in fact almost everything is speed.

Speed is also an important factor in the curative powers of medicine, and it has been proven by an avalanche of testimonials, that the greatest remedy for speed and rapidity in relieving and curing diseases of the kidneys and bladder, blood, liver, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, is DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY.

The speed of this wonderful discovery for diseases of the kidneys and bladder, is not so rapid as to injure and interfere with the other healthy organs of the body; but rather of a gradual uniform speed, consistent with the best results.

If your back pains you; if your urine, after you have deposited some in a glass, and let it stand for 24 hours, has a smoky, milky appearance; if you have a frequent desire to urinate during the night and scalding pains accompany its passage, your kidneys and bladder require instant treatment, by taking Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

The startling results of this renowned remedy, in relieving and curing diseases of the kidneys and bladder have amazed the whole medical world.

Druggists sell it in New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles.

Vacation.

You city folks who toil and moil and growl,
Because for you vacation does no beckoning,
Hush your repinings, smother every howl,
No summer board bill falleth to your reckoning.
If you could see the painful sights that we
Poor country folks are now compelled to witness,
Of city culture, capering on the tea,
Oft disregarding age and sex and fitness,
You'd thank your lucky and unlucky stars
That keep your nose unto the stone that grindeth.
When bulky matrons vault the pasture bars
No pleasure in the spectacle one findeth.
When grizzled grandsires blow a penny horn
And think it very humorous and witty,
And you applauding, must conceal your scorn—
Be thankful Labor keeps you in the city.
I used to stand in awe of city folks,
Was envious indeed of their position;
But now, I understand the simple jokes
We're read, about their culture, erudition.
For when you see them all a-playing tag
And leap-frog, then you know their polished manners
Are nit, or have been packed into a bag
With moth-balls, till Vacation furls her banners.
They reckon how a simple country jay,—
A farmer who plants buttercups and daisies,
Who wields his knife and fork the good old way,
And herds the honey bee—can go to blazes.
More infantile they play each passing hour,
It seems to one who milks the flowing cattle,
Until as youth increases strength and power,
From the "googoo eye" they'll change to rubber rattle.

"Hoss" Doctoring.

Once on a time a horse was sick, a steed of great renown,
Which had the name of being the most vicious one in town.
The tidings spread; men rushed in haste from every rank and place
To take a diagnosis of this peculiar case.
Among them humane, honest men, and some who didn't care,
Some thought they knew just what to do, and how and when and where.
And here and there a farrier, who wished to show his skill,
And so prescribed his nostrum that would surely cure or kill!
Then came the man who knew it all, and one who did not care;
And many a sage conclusion was wasted on the air.
While one poor chap admitted that he surely didn't know.
Another acquiesced with all and said he thought jes so.
And one man didn't keer a cuss, 'twas none of his concern,
He came to squirt terbarker juice and see what he could learn.
A multitude assembled before the day was done
Of every ic and ism that is known beneath the sun.
And though they differed widely on one point did agree,
That something ailed the critter, that all could plainly see,
For though a horse of lordly mein and once so full of vim,
Now agony was manifest in quivering flank and limb.
The question was "what ailed him?" Each man was mortal sure
If he could use his remedy there'd be a speedy cure.
There met on this occasion the merchant and the clown,
The lady fascinators and the fathers of the town,
And men of legal notions, to pick out every flaw,
And see if they went right or wrong and lay down "pints" of law.
One said that his opinion was a trouble with the gall;
Another thought blind staggers, and feared the hoss would fall;
One advocated physic to make his bowels slide;
One said he needed exercise and took him out to ride.
They gave him many nostrums, and lotions they applied;
They roasted him and toasted him and wondrous tactics tried.
At last is desperation a Solomon arose,
And in profoundest wisdom poured nitre up his nose.
At this the poor old horse rebelled, their labor was in vain,
He only beat the harder in evidence of pain.
One said the horse was never right since he was first a foal,
But it wasn't any matter for he hadn't any soul.
Another said that demons lurked in his firy eye;
While he was sick and penitent 'twas best to let him die.
Among the many wise men his trainer said the least,
Though his heart was full of pity for the poor old tortured beast,
Still struggling for freedom from torment and from pain—
Along came Dr. W——, the last man on the train!
And when the horse got easy as he did at close of day,
And the faculty retired to rest, to ponder and to pray,
Each thought himself a hero, and was so mortal sure,
That he himself was just the one who had performed the cure. F. E. SPEERS.

Personalities That Attract or Repel.

There is an indescribable something in certain personalities which is greater than mere physical beauty and more powerful than learning. This charm of personality is a divine gift that often sways the strongest characters, and sometimes even controls the destinies of nations.

We are unconsciously influenced by people who possess this magnetic power. The moment we come into their presence we have a sense of enlargement, of expansion in every direction. They seem to unlock within us possibilities of which we previously had no conception. Our horizon broadens; we feel a new power stirring through all our being; we experience a sense of relief as if a great weight which long had pressed upon us had been removed, says Success.

We can converse with such people in a way that astonishes us, although meeting them, perhaps, for the first time. We express ourselves more clearly and eloquently than we believed we could. They draw out the best that is in us; they introduce us, as it were, to our larger, better selves. With their presence, impulses and longings come thronging to our minds which never stirred us before. All at once life takes on a higher and nobler meaning, and we are fired with a desire to do more than we have ever before done, and to be more than we have been in the past.

A few minutes before, perhaps, we were sad and discouraged, when, suddenly, the flashlight of a potent personality of this kind has opened a rift in our lives and revealed to us hidden capabilities. Sadness gives place to joy, despair to hope, and disheartenment to encouragement. We have been toned to finer issues; we have caught a glimpse of higher ideals; and, for the moment at least, have been transformed. The old commonplace life, with its absence of purpose and endeavor, has dropped out of sight, and we resolve, with better heart and newer hope, to struggle to make permanently ours the forces and potentialities that have been revealed to us.

Even a momentary contact with a character of this kind seems to double our mental and soul powers, as two great dynamos double the current which passes over the wire, and we are loath to leave the magical presence lest we lose our new born power.

On the other hand, we frequently meet people who make us shrivel and shrink into ourselves. The moment they come near us we experience a cold chill, as if a blast of winter had struck us in midsummer. A blighting, narrowing sensation, which seems to make us suddenly smaller, passes over us. We feel a decided loss of power, of possibility.

We could no more smile in their presence than we could laugh while at a funeral. Their gloomy, miasmatic atmosphere chills all our natural impulses. In their presence there is no possibility of expansion for us. As a dark cloud suddenly obscures the brightness of a smiling summer sky, their shadows are cast upon us and fill us with vague, undefinable uneasiness.

We instinctively feel that such people have no sympathy with our aspirations and our natural prompting is to guard closely any expression of our hopes and ambitions. When they are near us our laudable purposes and desires shrink into insignificance and mere foolishness, the charm of sentiment vanishes and life seems to lose color and zest. The effect of their presence is paralyzing and we hasten from it as soon as possible.

If we study these two types of personality, we shall find that the chief difference between them is that the first loves his kind, and the latter does not. Of course, that rare charm of manner which captivates all those who come within the sphere of its influence, and that strong personal magnetism which inclines all hearts toward its fortunate possessor, are largely natural gifts. But we shall find that the man who practices unselfishness, who is genuinely interested in the welfare of others, who feels it a privilege to have the power to do a fellow-creature a kindness—even though polished manners and a gracious presence may be conspicuous by their absence—will be an elevating influence wherever he goes. He will bring encouragement to and uplift every life that touches his. He will be trusted and loved by all who come in contact with him. This type of personality we may all cultivate if we will.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Great Swimmers, These.

Young Rainbow Trout at the New York Aquarium Do Wonderful Feats—Swim Against a Current That's Pretty Swift.

What little trout can do in the way of jumping and in the way of swimming up hill against a current was shown lately in the case of a lot of agile youngsters at the New York Aquarium. These little brown trout, two inches or thereabout in length, would jump a height equal to their own length up a waterfall from an inch pipe seven inches long, and then swim up the pipe to the trough above. But some little rainbow trout hatched at the Aquarium have lately done something much more remarkable than that.

Shad eggs at the Aquarium this spring were hatched in jars from which siphon tubes ran to tanks close by. As the fishes were hatched out they rose naturally to the top of the water in the jar, where they were caught in the current setting toward the opening into the siphon tube, and siphoned off into the tank.

A half inch foot-long glass tube rising through an opening in the top of the jar formed a part of the siphon, to the top of this glass tube being attached a rubber pipe to form the curving part. This rubber tube, which was half an inch in diameter inside, ran up to and over an iron rail, on which it was supported, curving down from there and rising again in an upward curve to the edge of the tank, upon which the pipe again rested, the end of the pipe being carried down under the surface, in the water of the tank.

While there are at the moment no eggs in process of hatching in them, the jars are not dismantled, but the water is kept circulating through them and young fishes are, shown in the tanks. Thus there are now in one of the tanks a lot of young rainbow trout. They were hatched out here last February, and the biggest are about 2½ inches in length.

These little rainbows are all the time loitering around the opening of the siphon tube, through which a current is always flowing, just as the fishes in any aquarium tank may be found around the tank's intake; and they are all the time trying to make their way up the pipe, as they would try to make their way up the current of a stream in nature. Two of them, including one of the very biggest, last week did make their way from this tank through the siphon tube and over into the jar with which the tube connects.

To do this these two little rainbows had to swim against the current through a pipe scarcely greater in diameter than their own width with pectoral fins extended, this narrow pipe being nearly three feet in length and presenting to them a total rise of eight inches or more in two ascending curves. It was a steep rise for them for the first few inches of the pipe, to where it rested on the edge of the tank, from which point they slid down into the valley formed by the downward curve of the hose, outside the tank; while from there they had to climb with the upward curve of the hose the steep incline to where the hose was carried over the supporting bar. Once over that, of course, they couldn't do otherwise than drop, head first, down the glass pipe into the jar.

The hatching jars are like big, tall, wide-mouthed bottles with screw tops, through which run the intake pipe and the siphon-tube. It was, of course, necessary to unscrew the top of the jar into which the two young rainbows had thus made their way in order to get them out and return them to their tank.

A Washington despatch says that veterans of the Civil War are dying at the rate of ninety a day. Widow son pension rolls are dying at the rate of twenty a day. Despite the fact that the Spanish-American War has added thousands of names to the pay rolls and the number of pension certificates issued for the year ending June 1 exceed by 13,000 the certificates issued for 1902, the losses by death in each of the eighteen pension agencies in the five months from January to May inclusive, have been greater than the gains through the addition of new names.

The Man Who Named The Republican Party.

Israel Washburn was a member of Congress from Maine from 1851 to 1860, when he was elected governor, and after the war until his death was collector of the port at Portland. On May 22, 1854, the pro-slavery advocates passed the "Kansas-Nebraska bill," which was very obnoxious to the free State men, of whom Mr. Washburn was a leader, and on the night of its passage he called a meeting of the anti-slavery members of Congress to meet with him the next morning in the rooms of Congressmen Elliott and Dickinson of the Massachusetts delegation. At that meeting, Mr. Washburn showed to them the utter futility of attempting legislation through the whig and democratic parties, and advocated the organization of a new party with a declaration of principles along the lines afterward followed by the Republican party. His earnest appeal bore fruit, and then and there the new party was launched.

When the question of a name for the new political organization came up, there was some difference of opinion, but in the language of the biographer of Mr. Washburn, he said, "The name republican is the most proper and suggestive name and the least objectionable that could be adopted. It is a name to conjure with, honorable in its antecedents and history, and under it people ever so much divided in their political views on other and minor questions could unite on a footing of perfect equality and with no implied surrender of principles or convictions."

The idea was received with enthusiasm by every member present except one, who was not yet prepared to give up the long-cherished name of whig.

To Gain Happiness in Married Life.

Happiness in married life is to be gained, just as enduring happiness in any other place of existence on earth is to be found—by the use of the old fashioned virtues of unselfishness, consideration for others, politeness and kindness, all based on love and capped by common sense.

Like the old recipe for cooking the hare, which begins, "First catch your hare," a happy marriage for a woman begins with "First select your man." Not an ideal-made seraph, not an ossified brain, not a mere animal, but a man capable of loving and appreciating a woman's love.

Of course, he will be more or less selfish. That is the way parents usually rear their sons. It is your task to bear with this selfishness at first until you can tactfully teach him how beautiful is thoughtfulness for others, and in a very sweet but dignified way show him that you expect the same treatment you bestow.

In the meantime you must recollect that a husband can't always at every approach, be the prince charming to anchor the enchanted princess with his first kiss, if he is skilled enough in love's arts and refined enough to wish to keep the interesting role.

And in all love's way man is much given to following woman's lead.

If you have no independent income of your own, have an understanding in your honeymoon with regard to money matters. Ask for an allowance to be set apart for your use, in order that no humiliating and indelicate discussions need never occur between you on this subject. Then study to be economical and thrifty—and wise in your use of allowance.

Love, sense and patience. Those are the three important elements necessary to happiness in marriage.

How to Live Long.

The Chicago philanthropist, Dr. D. K. Pearsons, when celebrating his eightieth birthday, gave these pointers on long life:

No pies or cakes; no pains or aches.

Most men dig their graves with their teeth.

If you overwork your liver, it will soon tell on your brain.

Live like a farmer and you will live like a prince.

Men can live ten days without eating. They can't do without pure air for five minutes.

Don't get angry and don't get excited. Every time you fret, you lose a minute of life.

Let a man abuse his stomach, and he'll get fidgety and cross to his family.

Doctors say, don't sleep on a full stomach. I take my after-dinner nap just the same, and I'm eighty years old. You can't believe all the doctors say.

If you catch a cold, lose your quinine and eat an onion.

Give away your money. It's exhilarating and tends to longevity.

The idea of giving while one is alive will become epidemic as soon as people discover how much fun it is.

How many men would not pay a high price for an infallible recipe of the way to win a woman? The man whose character hangs in the set of his coat and whose talent is consummated in his ability to dance a two-step, may be well enough to look upon and tread a measure with; but when a woman considers giving up her love and life she wants a real man—one with firmer characteristics than these. In The Cosmopolitan for August Lavinia Hart, in an able article, attempts to solve the problem of "The Way to Win a Woman."

The time has arrived when the usual precautions against drinking ice water may be in order. As an exchange puts it:

Full many a mortal young and old
Has gone to his sarcophagus
Through pouring water icy cold
Adown his warm oesophagus.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Does a Wondrous Work for a Lady Who Was Almost Crazed with Pain and Suffering.

It is well known that terrible rheumatism, sciatica, and neuralgia cause more helplessness, acute suffering, and agony, than any of the other diseases that afflict humanity. The great medicinal virtues of Paine's Celery Compound make it the only trustworthy specific for the cure of all forms of rheumatism and neuralgia. Thousands of strong testimonial letters from the most prominent people of the land, prove that Paine's Celery Compound has banished these terribly fatal troubles when all other treatment has failed. Mrs. Margaret Bethel, of Brainerd, Minn., after thirty years of agonizing tortures had a desire to end her life, if it was the will of Heaven; she almost prayed for the time to lay it down. Heaven-directed, she made use of Paine's Celery Compound, and is enjoying true life once more. She says:—

"For thirty years I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia in the head, and also with rheumatism in the whole body. I began taking Paine's Celery Compound and soon found I was much better. Before taking the Compound, my life was such a burden that I almost prayed to lay it down. I was bedfast every two weeks with horrible pain in the head, back, and neck, until I was almost crazed. I am able to do harder work and more of it today than for twenty-five years. I am really enjoying life again, thanks to Paine's Celery Compound. I am satisfied that my life has been prolonged many years by its use."

IMPORTANCE OF SPEED.

A GREAT FACTOR IN EVERY DAY LIFE.

In these days of rapid progress, one of the most important factors in business and science; in transportation; in sports and in fact almost everything is speed.

Speed is also an important factor in the curative powers of medicine, and it has been proven by an avalanche of testimonials, that the greatest remedy for speed and rapidity in relieving and curing diseases of the kidneys and bladder, blood, liver, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, is DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY.

The speed of this wonderful discovery for diseases of the kidneys and bladder, is not so rapid as to injure and interfere with the other healthy organs of the body; but rather of a gradual uniform speed, consistent with the best results.

If your back pains you; if your urine, after you have deposited some in a glass, and let it stand for 24 hours, has a smoky, milky appearance; if you have a frequent desire to urinate during the night and scalding pains accompany its passage, your kidneys and bladder require instant treatment, by taking Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

The startling results of this renowned remedy, in relieving and curing diseases of the kidneys and bladder have amazed the whole medical world.

Druggists sell it in New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles.

Sample bottle—enough for trial, free by mail.

Vacation.

You city folks who toil and moil and growl,
Because for you vacation does no beckoning,
Hush your repinings, smother every howl,
No summer board bill falleth to your reckoning.
If you could see the painful sights that we
Poor country folks are now compelled to witness,
Of city culture, capering on the lea,
Oft disregarding age and sex and fitness,
You'd thank your lucky and unlucky stars
That keep your nose unto the stone that grindeth.
When bulky matrons vault the pasture bars
No pleasure in the spectacle one findeth.
When grizzled grandsires blow a penny horn
And think it very humorous and witty,
And you applauding, must conceal your scorn—
Be thankful Labor keeps you in the city.
I used to stand in awe of city folks,
Was envious indeed of their position;
But now, I understand the simple jokes
We read, about their culture, erudition.
For when you see them all a-playing tag
And leap-frog, then you know their polished manners
Are nit, or have been packed into a bag
With moth-balls, till Vacation furls her banners.
They reckon how a simple country jay,—
A farmer who plants buttercups and daisies,
Who wields his knife and fork the good old way,
And herds the honey bee—can go to blazes.
More infantile they play each passing hour,
It seems to one who milks the flowing cattle,
Until as youth increases strength and power,
From the "googoo eye" they'll change to rubber rattle.

"Hoss" Doctoring.

Once on a time a horse was sick, a steed of great renown,
Which had the name of being the most vicious one in town.
The tidings spread; men rushed in haste from every rank and place
To take a diagnosis of this peculiar case.
Among them humane, honest men, and some who didn't care,
Some thought they knew just what to do, and how and when and where.
And here and there a farrier, who wished to show his skill,
And so prescribed his nostrum that would surely cure or kill!
Then came the man who knew it all, and one who did not care;
And many a sage conclusion was wasted on the air.
While one poor chap admitted that he surely didn't know.
Another acquiesced with all and said he thought jes so.
And one man didn't keer a cuss, 'twas none of his concern,
He came to squirt terbarker juice and see what he could learn.
A multitude assembled before the day was done
Of every ic and ism that is known beneath the sun.
And though they differed widely on one point did agree,
That something ailed the critter, that all could plainly see,
For though a horse of lordly mein and once so full of vim,
Now agony was manifest in quivering flank and limb.
The question was "what ailed him?" Each man was mortal sure
If he could use his remedy there'd be a speedy cure.
There met on this occasion the merchant and the clown,
The lady fascinators and the fathers of the town,
And men of legal notions, to pick out every flaw,
And see if they went right or wrong and lay down "pints" of law.
One said that his opinion was a trouble with the gall;
Another thought blind staggers, and feared the hoss would fall;
One advocated physic to make his bowels slide;
One said he needed exercise and took him out to ride.
They gave him many nostrums, and lotions they applied;
They roasted him and toasted him and wondrous tactics tried.
At last is desperation a Solomon arose,
And in profoundest wisdom poured nitre up his nose.
At this the poor old horse rebelled, their labor was in vain,
He only beat the harder in evidence of pain.
One said the horse was never right since he was first a foal,
But it wasn't any matter for he hadn't any soul.
Another said that demons lurked in his firy eye;
While he was sick and penitent 'twas best to let him die.
Among the many wise men his trainer said the least,
Though his heart was full of pity for the poor old tortured beast,
Still struggling for rreedom from torment and from pain—
Along came Dr. W——, the last man on the train!
And when the horse got easy as he did at close of day,
And the faculty retired to rest, to ponder and to pray,
Each thought himself a hero, and was so mortal sure,
That he himself was just the one who had performed the cure. F. E. SPEERS.

Personalities That Attract or Repel.

There is an indescribable something in certain personalities which is greater than mere physical beauty and more powerful than learning. This charm of personality is a divine gift that often sways the strongest characters, and sometimes even controls the destinies of nations.

We are unconsciously influenced by people who possess this magnetic power. The moment we come into their presence we have a sense of enlargement, of expansion in every direction. They seem to unlock within us possibilities of which we previously had no conception. Our horizon broadens; we feel a new power stirring through all our being; we experience a sense of relief as if a great weight which long had pressed upon us had been removed, says Success.

We can converse with such people in a way that astonishes us, although meeting them, perhaps, for the first time. We express ourselves more clearly and eloquently than we believed we could. They draw out the best that is in us; they introduce us, as it were, to our larger, better selves. With their presence, impulses and longings come thronging to our minds which never stirred us before. All at once life takes on a higher and nobler meaning, and we are fired with a desire to do more than we have ever before done, and to be more than we have been in the past.

A few minutes before, perhaps, we were sad and discouraged, when, suddenly, the flashlight of a potent personality of this kind has opened a rift in our lives and revealed to us hidden capabilities. Sadness gives place to joy, despair to hope, and disheartenment to encouragement. We have been toned to finer issues; we have caught a glimpse of higher ideals; and, for the moment at least, have been transformed. The old commonplace life, with its absence of purpose and endeavor, has dropped out of sight, and we resolve, with better heart and newer hope, to struggle to make permanently ours the forces and potentialities that have been revealed to us.

Even a momentary contact with a character of this kind seems to double our mental and soul powers, as two great dynamos double the current which passes over the wire, and we are loath to leave the magical presence lest we lose our new born power.

On the other hand, we frequently meet people who make us shrivel and shrink into ourselves. The moment they come near us we experience a cold chill, as if a blast of winter had struck us in midsummer. A blighting, narrowing sensation, which seems to make us suddenly smaller, passes over us. We feel a decided loss of power, of possibility.

We could no more smile in their presence than we could laugh while at a funeral. Their gloomy, miasmatic atmosphere chills all our natural impulses. In their presence there is no possibility of expansion for us. As a dark cloud suddenly obscures the brightness of a smiling summer sky, their shadows are cast upon us and fill us with vague, undefinable uneasiness.

We instinctively feel that such people have no sympathy with our aspirations and our natural prompting is to guard closely any expression of our hopes and ambitions. When they are near us our laudable purposes and desires shrink into insignificance and mere foolishness, the charm of sentiment vanishes and life seems to lose color and zest. The effect of their presence is paralyzing and we hasten from it as soon as possible.

If we study these two types of personality, we shall find that the chief difference between them is that the first loves his kind, and the latter does not. Of course, that rare charm of manner which captivates all those who come within the sphere of its influence, and that strong personal magnetism which inclines all hearts toward its fortunate possessor, are largely natural gifts. But we shall find that the man who practices unselfishness, who is genuinely interested in the welfare of others, who feels it a privilege to have the power to do a fellow-creature a kindness—even though polished manners and a gracious presence may be conspicuous by their absence—will be an elevating influence wherever he goes. He will bring encouragement to and uplift every life that touches his. He will be trusted and loved by all who come in contact with him. This type of personality we may all cultivate if we will.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Great Swimmers, These.

Young Rainbow Trout at the New York Aquarium Do Wonderful Feats—Swim Against a Current That's Pretty Swift.

What little trout can do in the way of jumping and in the way of swimming up hill against a current was shown lately in the case of a lot of agile youngsters at the New York Aquarium. These little brown trout, two inches or thereabout in length, would jump a height equal to their own length up a waterfall from an inch pipe seven inches long, and then swim up the pipe to the trough above. But some little rainbow trout hatched at the Aquarium have lately done something much more remarkable than that.

Shad eggs at the Aquarium this spring were hatched in jars from which siphon tubes ran to tanks close by. As the fishes were hatched out they rose naturally to the top of the water in the jar, where they were caught in the current setting toward the opening into the siphon tube, and siphoned off into the tank.

A half inch foot-long glass tube rising through an opening in the top of the jar formed a part of the siphon, to the top of this glass tube being attached a rubber pipe to torm the curving part. This rubber tube, which was half an inch in diameter inside, ran up to and over an iron rail, on which it was supported, curving down from there and rising again in an upward curve to the edge of the tank, upon which the pipe again rested, the end of the pipe being carried down under the surface, in the water of the tank.

While there are at the moment no eggs in process of hatching in them, the jars are not dismantled, but the water is kept circulating through them and young fishes are, shown in the tanks. Thus there are now in one of the tanks a lot of young rainbow trout. They were hatched out here last February, and the biggest are about 2½ inches in length.

These little rainbows are all the time loitering around the opening of the siphon tube, through which a current is always flowing, just as the fishes in any aquarium tank may be found around the tank's intake; and they are all the time trying to make their way up the pipe, as as they would try to make their way up the current of a stream in nature. Two of them, including one of the very biggest, last week did make their way from this tank through the siphon tube and over into the jar with which the tube connects.

To do this these two little rainbows had to swim against the current through a pipe scarcely greater in diameter than their own width with pectoral fins extended, this narrow pipe being nearly three feet in length and presenting to them a total rise of eight inches or more in two ascending curves. It was a steep rise for them for the first few inches of the pipe, to where it rested on the edge of the tank, from which point they slid down into the valley formed by the downward curve of the hose, outside the tank; while from there they had to climb with the upward curve of the hose the steep incline to where the hose was carried over the supporting bar. Once over that, of course, they couldn't do otherwise than drop, head first, down the glass pipe into the jar.

The hatching jars are like big, tall, wide-mouthed bottles with screw tops, through which run the intake pipe and the siphon-tube. It was, of course, necessary to unscrew the top of the jar into which the two young rainbows had thus made their way, in order to get them out and return them to their tank.

A Washington despatch says that veterans of the Civil War are dying at the rate of ninety a day. Widow son pension rolls are dying at the rate of twenty a day. Despite the fact that the Spanish-American War has added thousands of names to the pay rolls and the number of pension certificates issued for the year ending June 1 exceed by 13,000 the certificates issued for 1902, the losses by death in each of the eighteen pension agencies in the five months from January to May inclusive, have been greater than the gains through the addition of new names.

Once again, blessed be nothing.

The Man Who Named The Republican Party.

Israel Washburn was a member of Congress from Maine from 1851 to 1860, when he was elected governor, and after the war until his death was collector of the port at Portland. On May 22, 1854, the pro-slavery advocates passed the "Kansas-Nebraska bill," which was very obnoxious to the free State men, of whom Mr. Washburn was a leader, and on the night of its passage he called a meeting of the anti-slavery members of Congress to meet with him the next morning in the rooms of Congressmen Elliott and Dickinson of the Massachusetts delegation. At that meeting, Mr. Washburn showed to them the utter futility of attempting legislation through the whig and democratic parties, and advocated the organization of a new party with a declaration of principles along the lines afterward followed by the Republican party. His earnest appeal bore fruit, and then and there the new party was launched.

When the question of a name for the new political organization came up, there was some difference of opinion, but in the language of the biographer of Mr. Washburn, he said, "The name republican is the most proper and suggestive name and the least objectionable that could be adopted. It is a name to conjure with, honorable in its antecedents and history, and under it people ever so much divided in their political views on other and minor questions could unite on a footing of perfect equality and with no implied surrender of principles or convictions."

The idea was received with enthusiasm by every member present except one, who was not yet prepared to give up the long-cherished name of whig.

To Gain Happiness in Married Life.

Happiness in married life is to be gained, just as enduring happiness in any other place of existence on earth is to be found—by the use of the old fashioned virtues of unselfishness, consideration for others, politeness and kindness, all based on love and capped by common sense.

Like the old recipe for cooking the hare, which begins, "First catch your hare," a happy marriage for a woman begins with "First select your man." Not an ideal-made seraph, not an ossified brain, not a mere animal, but a man capable of loving and appreciating a woman's love.

Of course, he will be more or less selfish. That is the way parents usually rear their sons. It is your task to bear with this selfishness at first until you can tactfully teach him how beautiful is thoughtfulness for others, and in a very sweet but dignified way show him that you expect the same treatment you bestow.

In the meantime you must recollect that a husband can't always at every approach, be the prince charming to anchor the enchanted princess with his first kiss, if he is skilled enough in love's arts and refined enough to wish to keep the interesting role.

And in all love's way man is much given to following woman's lead.

If you have no independent income of your own, have an understanding in your honeymoon with regard to money matters. Ask for an allowance to be set apart for your use, in order that no humiliating and indelicate discussions need never occur between you on this subject. Then study to be economical and thrifty—and wise in your use of allowance.

Love, sense and patience. Those are the three important elements necessary to happiness in marriage.

How to Live Long.

The Chicago philanthropist, Dr. D. K. Pearsons, when celebrating his eightieth birthday, gave these pointers on long life:

No pies or cakes; no pains or aches.

Most men dig their graves with their teeth.

If you overwork your liver, it will soon tell on your brain.

Live like a farmer and you will live like a prince.

Men can live ten days without eating. They can't do without pure air for five minutes.

Don't get angry and don't get excited. Every time you fret, you lose a minute of life.

Let a man abuse his stomach, and he'll get fidgety and cross to his family.

Doctors say, don't sleep on a full stomach. I take my after-dinner nap just the same, and I'm eighty-years old. You can't believe all the doctors say.

If you catch a cold, lose your quinine and eat an onion.

Give away your money. It's exhilarating and tends to longevity.

The idea of giving while one is alive will become epidemic as soon as people discover how much fnn it is.

How many men would not pay a high price for an infallible recipe of the way to win a woman? The man whose character hangs in the set of his coat and whose talent is consummated in his ability to dance a two-step, may be well enough to look upon and tread a measure with; but when a woman considers giving up her love and life she wants a a real man—one with firmer characteristics than these. In The Cosmopolitan for August Lavinia Hart, in an able article, attempts to solve the problem of "The Way to Win a Woman."

The time has arrived when the usual precautions against drinking ice water may be in order. As an exchange puts it:

Full many a mortal young and old
Has gone to his sarcophagus
Through pouring water icy cold
Adown his warm oesophagus.

Marvelous Escape from Death!
PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
Does a Wondrous Work for a Lady Who Was Almost Crazed with Pain and Suffering.

It is well known that terrible rheumatism, sciatica, and neuralgia cause more helplessness, acute suffering, and agony, than any of the other diseases that afflict humanity. The great medicinal virtues of Paine's Celery Compound make it the only trustworthy specific for the cure of all forms of rheumatism and neuralgia. Thousands of strong testimonial letters from the most prominent people of the land, prove that Paine's Celery Compound has banished these terribly fatal troubles when all other treatment has failed. Mrs. Margaret Bethel, of Brainerd, Minn., after thirty years of agonizing tortures had a desire to end her life, if it was the will of Heaven; she almost prayed for the time to lay it down. Heaven-directed, she made use of Paine's Celery Compound, and is enjoying true life once more. She says:—

"For thirty years I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia in the head, and also with rheumatism in the whole body. I began taking Paine's Celery Compound and soon found I was much better. Before taking the Compound, my life was such a burden that I almost prayed to lay it down. I was bedfast every two weeks with horrible pain in the head, back, and neck, until I was almost crazed. I am able to do harder work and more of it today than for twenty-five years. I am really enjoying life again, thanks to Paine's Celery Compound. I am satisfied that my life has been prolonged many years by its use."

The Legend of Mt. Percival.

One morning in August I left my cottage by the shore of the blue Penobscot bay, and took the well worn path across lots worn by the feet of the many pilgrims who had gone before, which path if followed faithfully would lead one to the foot of Mount Percival. It was early morning, the air was crisp and bracing, and the perfume from the heavily laden trees bearing upon their sturdy limbs Red Astrachan and Golden Summer Sweets, wafted to my senses by a gentle breeze, was sweet and pleasing. I soon reached higher ground, and paused to gaze my fill upon a scene rarely surpassed, though one may journey in many lands. Before and below me lay that fair rival of the bay of Naples, "blue Penobscot bay." Over across and in front was Brigadier Island, guarding the entrance to the noble river, made famous by the gallant Knox, when, in years long gone, he with his sturdy patriots proclaimed to Britons' lusty tars "no thoroughfare." A little to the right was "Turtle-head."

As I strolled along, climbing the old stage road; when near the top I saw by the roadside an aged man sitting on a moss-grown log, leaning upon his staff. I gave him "good-day," and was answered by a nod, a kindly smile, and a glance from out a pair of eyes that brought the thought to me that in the strength and luster of their earlier days mayhap sad havoc they had played with loving hearts. I paused and in a kindly voice he bade me tarry, making a place for me beside him on the mossy seat. And there we sat and talked of many things, both new and old; and as we talked acquaintance grew, and then he told to me a tale he heard his mother tell, as told to her by an Indian woman when she was young:

Jean Armand and His Wife Marie.

Long, long ago, when the great, dark forest stretched its primeval way down the Penobscot, and still down, till it touched the outmost shores that the great Atlantic kissed, came Jean Armand, trapping and trading with the Red men, friendly with all and liked by all. Many times he came and often, and then upon the mountain side he felled the giant pines and built a cabin. When all was done he went away but not for long. Soon he returned and with him came a little woman, blue of eye, with sunny, golden hair, his wife Marie, brought in his canoe down the noble river from his native Canada.

Though one would think it drear and lonely on the sometimes gloomy mountain side, not so with Jean's sunny-haired Marie. When he was away, she kept the house, visited by friendly Indians frequently, and watched over by all who tarried near. Time passed quickly, and when her great, strong Jean came home, tired with his tramping in the woods, it was a happy time indeed.

So time sped on, and joy and comfort reigned within the lonely cabin home; and then the clouded way appeared and where once dwelt joy and peace was doubt, then dreary, anxious days; for poor Marie was ill and Jean was fearful, and well so, for in the night there came to him a little child, but not to live. Its little spark of life went out, and with it fled the spirit of beautiful Marie; and so at one fell swoop poor Jean was left to mourn the loss of all he had in life—a wretched, lonely soul. And so at night he sadly took his way to the mountain top, and there dug a grave and in it laid both mother and child. Then, prostrate on the spot that hid his all from sight, Jean threw himself and sobbed, a very child; and when an hour had passed, he rose and raised his streaming face aloft and called the twinkling stars to keep a watch on those he had loved so well. Then down the mountain side he took his way and after that was seen no more.

But some have said that many times, when stars were shining overhead a stranger passed that way, and having reached the mountain's cone was seen to kneel in silent prayer and kiss at last the rustic stones that covered Jean's lost wife and child. Now, upon the summit of the lonely mount, a rock pile rears its cone-like form, a monument, it is said, upon the lonely mountain grave. And often, when mountain top and vale are kissed by the soft and lovely moonlight, the "summer girl" sitting with one of sturdier mold upon the mountain side dreams of the time when poor Jean Armand and his darling wife sat upon the self-same spot, and loved and hoped for joys that never came.

My aged friend, his tale well told, arose and giving me a kindly grasp of hand betook himself adown the mountain side and soon was lost to view. And I, saddened by the tale he told, resumed my thoughtful way; and as I passed I saw upon the mountain side, now overgrown by wild grasses and sweet flowers, the place where once (I love to think) nestled the little cabin of Jean Armand and his blue-eyed wife Marie.—[Belfast Journal.

Game Protection.

A Massachusetts Paper Describes Some Maine Schemes as Queer.

Maine is fast becoming hysterical on the subject of game protection and the advisibility of adopting further measures, which, it is thought, may serve to achieve that end, is being agitated. When the matter of requiring non-resident hunters to take out a license to kill big game was before the Maine Legislature many of the men who are interested in the welfare of sport in the great North woods gave the bill their hearty support because they saw that it would save the game to some extent, even though the bill was not the best which could have been drawn up, and they were glad to hear of its safe journey over the windfalls of the legislative trail. Now the Maine fish and game commission, headed by Leroy T. Carleton, its chairman, and the Maine sportsmen's fish and game association, are talking of a supplementary law which shall prohibit visiting sportsmen from taking guns into the woods during the closed season on game. On the surface, it would seem that such a law would be of much benefit, and might protect the game as well as human life, but if people stop to consider the proposed movement, they will see at once how absurd it is, and wonder what the commission and the association are driving at.

The plans for the proposed restriction were discussed at the recent meeting of the association at Moosehead lake, and some bitter opposition to the movement developed at once. The first great obstacle that the law will meet, if it ever comes to life, will be the drawing of the lines over which it shall be unlawful to take a gun or rifle until the hunting season is open. No line can be drawn by counties which will be of any practical value, for it is as hard to find a county line in the wilderness as it is to find a game warden at the present time. If the commission tries to keep all guns out of the State there will be some funny times, as a rigorous custom-house sort of inspection will have to be established, at every city and town on the border, and every man, woman and child entering the State will have to be searched so that the commission can be sure that no one is packing a gun into the heart of gameland.

In view of this fact, it is evident that such a law could never be properly enforced, even should it be found constitutional, and there seems to be some doubt on that point. Then why should it be agitated? Nearly every party that goes into the fishing camps in the summer takes in a small rifle or a revolver to pass away the rainy days with by shooting at a target. The average rifle used for target shooting in the camps could not knock down a deer at 10 feet unless the owner used the butt as a club. But few accidents have been reported from this source, as the men and women who do the shooting are apt to know what they are shooting at, and if they do not their guides are there to tell them such things and to look after them. The game commission makes the guides take out licenses, and therefore becomes responsible for them in a certain way, and if it really put any trust in them it could now show it by taking it for granted that they can look out for the game to some extent, and stop what poaching is now done by summer visitors.

Maine seemingly wants to protect herself against her visitors, the sportsmen who yearly leave several millions of dollars with her people who make their living from these sportsmen alone. Her commission wishes to do away with poaching and the killing of game out of season. Mr. Carleton must know, and if he does not he should, that a large proportion of the game killed out of season and beyond the limit which the law allows is killed by the people of his own state. Summer visitors kill some game, as the figures gathered by the commission show, but it is small in quantity as compared with that which goes into the pots at the lumber camps, the ovens of the scattered farm-houses and over the fire of the trapper's snow-bound camp.

What Maine needs is protection against herself. It is not the guides and their summer employers who are the worst poachers, but the natives who kill for meat and not for sport. When the non-resident hunters' tax was before the legislature, we suggested that it would be advisable that residents and non-residents be treated in somewhat the same manner, in view of the benefits received by the natives from the well-stocked purses of the visitors. The same holds good in the present case. If non-residents are not to be allowed to take guns into the woods during the closed season, all guns should be taken away from the natives of Maine during that time, if the game commission wish to appear just, and they would have a nice time taking them.

The State, if she really wishes to protect her game and continue to get a big revenue from it, needs a better warden service and not more prohibitory laws; more cooperation between the guides and the game commission, and not continued efforts to antagonize visiting sportsmen. If prohibitory laws are necessary, they should be of the sort which apply to all who hunt or fish, and not only to those who leave their money in Maine, and above all they should be tempered with that which all good laws must have—justice.—[Springfield Republican.

"I have a little niece who is addicted to drawing the long bow and exercising her imagination. The other day she told her mother that she had just met and played with a big yellow lion out in the park.

"'Now, Nellie,' said her mother, 'you know that is a story. You must not tell stories, and when you go to bed to-night you must pray the good Lord to forgive you for telling that story.'

"So, when Nellie had finished her prayers her mother asked her if she had prayed for forgiveness for telling that whopper.

"'Yes, mamma, and the good Lord says to me, 'Miss Nellie, I have often been fooled by that big yellow dog myself.'"

Some Figures on Apples.

There are now in the United States over two hundred million fruit-bearing apple trees, producing annually 176,000,000 bushels of apples. In good crop years we export 3,000,000 bushels of apples and consume at home two bushels annually for every adult and child in the country. These are the figures given out from Washington.

There are sixteen apple-growing states which produce 147,289,424 bushels of apples. All the other states together produce only 28,107,802 bushels. New York now stands first with 24,111,257 bushels, Pennsylvania second with 24,060,651 bushels, Ohio third with 20,617,480 bushels, Virginia fourth with 9,835,982 bushels, and Illinois fifth with 9,178,150 bushels. California is fifteenth in the list with 3,488,208 bushels.

Ten years ago, Ohio stood first among the apple-producing states, Michigan second, and Kentucky third. In the last decade, however, there has been heavy tree planting in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. The increase in the several states and territories in ten years was 81,641,000 trees.

In the same ten years the apple crop increased to 82 per cent. of all orchard fruits. In value of orchard products, California leads all other states ($14,526,786), New York standing second, Pennsylvania third, Ohio fourth, Illinois fifth and Michigan sixth.

These six states, with Indiana, Missouri, Virginia and New Jersey, raise 69 per cent. of our orchard fruits in peaches, and California first in plums, prunes, pears, grapes, oranges and lemons.

The apple is, as it always has been, the most popular of American fruits, and of all the orchard trees in the United States, 55 per cent. are apple trees.

Hard by the smithy on the Hill, the village tea-house stands. That is, it was a tea-house last Saturday, when Mr. Winslow, in the character of "Boniface of the Inn," assisted by Misses Brown, Mills, Reilly and Snow and Messrs. Reilly and Rodgers, served tea to a hungry and thirsty crowd numbering about a hundred. The historic little building on Lincoln street has passed through many changes since "Old Doctor Kittredge" dispensed pills and powders there. But it never looked prettier than when, transformed by rugs, curtains, quaint pictures and dainty tea-tables both within and without, it became for the time The Dog, a charming little inn. The artistic sign of The Dog was the work of Miss Brinckle. The souvenirs were made and given by Mrs. L. M. Brown, and consisted of views in and around Paris Hill. The whole affair was a great success and a nice sum was realized for the benefit of the hose company.

The event of last week was the tournament given by the Paris Hill Golf Club, under the auspices of its Greens Committee, and to say that it proved an unqualified success is hardly praise enough. Every detail, even to the weather, was all that could be desired. The beautiful cups offered as first prizes were donated by Mrs. Lewis M. Brown, and the four-leaf-clover pins offered as second prizes were the gift of Charles F. Matthewson, esq. Many contestants entered, and after a very earnest and entirely friendly contest lasting two days, Mr. Matthewson and Miss Case won first, and Mr. Brooks and Miss Carter second prizes. The arrangement of partners and contestants was done entirely by lot, and special printed rules and score cards were distributed before play commenced. A large audience watched the play, and much interest was manifested. The contestants and score were as follows:

First Round.

We are glad to give the public an authentic report of the town meeting held July 20th to finally settle the centennial question. F. G. Sloan was elected moderator by a large majority of votes against John Lord opponent. Mr. Sloan handled the business before the meeting in a perfectly unprejudiced manner. The town house side won by a large majority on all articles voted on, the votes standing fifty to thirty, giving twenty mrjority. Those of the gentler sex that were present at the meeting had no intention of infringing on forbidden precincts, and were highly pleased with the courtesy extended to them on their first visit to a town meeting. Those thirty-five disgusted (?) voters can easily be resolved into those utterly indifferent to time or place of the celebration which will be held Aug. 12th, 1903. A free dinner will be furnished for all who come, and a cordial welcome is assured, as a large majority of the people of Albany stand as a committee of one to disperse the hospitality of the town. Below is a prospectus of the program which is being arranged by the principal ones having charge, i. e., Mrs. A. J. Judkins, Messrs. Beckler and Hazelton. Bryant's Pond Band, twenty-five pieces will be in attendance throughout the the day. A few of the exercises will be conducted in the forenoon, from ten until half past eleven. The whole program will be interspersed with music, short speeches from many former residents and visitors, letters from many who will be unable to be present, a centennial poem, a talk on the early history of the religious societies by the Rev. Mr. Hale, a talk on Old Home Week and many other interesting features. A ball game is being arranged. Each out of town visitor is especially invited to call at the town house at their earliest convenience and register their names in a book provided for that purpose; also all residents of the town who will be pleased to do so. All relics brought will be faithfully cared for.

SWEDEN.

Died from His Burns.

At 12.20, Sunday morning, July 12, the alarm of fire was sounded and upon investigation it was discovered that the basement of Coos cottage, North Stratford, N. H., was in flames, and before assistance could be secured the flames were beyond control. They spread rapidly and the barn was soon ignited and before two hours the whole set of buildings were flat.

A few minutes after the fire was under way a man was seen to run from the buildings with his clothing on fire, and after the excitement was a little subsided some person found this man in the iron bridge with his clothing half burned off his body in a deranged state of mind. He was taken to the Daley House and Dr. Evans summoned. Upon investigation it was found to be Henry J. Evans, brother of Dr. Evans. He was burned and blackened almost beyond recognition. His burns were dressed by his brother and we was tenderly cared for the remainder of the night, but at 4.30 o'clock, Sunday morning, he died. Mr. Evans was a blacksmith by trade and has for several years been in the employ of the Connecticut River Lumber Co.

Prof. Wight's fine musical abilities both as an instructor and leader are well known and it is a pleasure to listen to his finely cultivated voice. NORWAY AND VICINITY

A Funny Show.

The show, "Who's Who?" which was put on at the Opera House, Friday evening, was advertised to be nothing but pure fun, and it kept very close to that promise. The plot was but a very thin skeleton, along which were arranged ludicrous and ridiculous situations. There was nothing offensive about the play, nothing that could be made the basis of any objection, and it furnished the audience with almost a steady program of laughs.

The child actress was exceptionally excellent, both in what little actual acting the plot called for and her dances and songs. There were a large number of the later songs sung, the dancing was varied and good, while the comedians, both men and women, were of a high grade, and furnished much amusement.

J. Orin Smith, esq., of Presque Isle spent last week in Norway with his father, James Smith.

Camp Meetings Draw Near.

A great many interesting events come along in Maine after haying is over and the forage is safely under the roofs of the barns. Nearly all the parish Sunday school organizations not more than fifty miles back from salt water take excursion trips down river, and enjoy a full and most joyous day by the sea, eating clam stews, roaming on the beach for shells and other specimens of marine life, and inhaling great drafts of atmosphere deeply impregnated with saline odors. Not a few of us hitch horses into heavy wagons, and loading the body with tents, food and bedding, stray off to the blueberry plains, where we combine business and pleasure by living under the greenwood trees and picking fruit from the wild bushes that spread away for miles on either side. Still others hire boats or yachts, and equipping our long lines with hooks and sinkers, move by wind and tide and oars to the islands, where hake and cod and pollock and lobsters abound.

All these outings are good and delightful, but to us the best of the summer season lies inside that hot and busy week we spend at camp meeting, making the acquaintance of old cronies once again, eating anything we can get, sleeping anywhere or nowhere, and looking over the happy people who are on similar trips to our own. It is very doubtful if camp meetings are profitable investments from a purely religious sense.

Few persons "get religion" as the saying is, during such outings. But most of us get health and information and pleasure, all of which tend to place the body in a receptive condition for good things. Except when some famous exhorter comes along and stirs the souls of sinners to their very depths, there are few camp meeting revivals, nowadays, and these grow fewer with the advancing years. Nevertheless, the singing under the leafy arches is something grand, the talk is always good and entertaining, and the whole influence of camp meetings is salutary. This summer, when our very wise and very good friends get ready to open up Northport for camp meeting purposes and let in the throngs which are sure to come, we hope to be present and listen to those dear old hymns which soothed the souls of our ancestors, and which cause Heaven to draw nearer to the vilest of us—sinners all that we are.

The spirit and purpose of camp meetings are worthy of encouragement, and we don't care what the denomination is, be it Methodist or Advent or Spiritualist or Baptist or plain Christian without any final "ist," we like the idea and hope the attendance may grow larger and the gate receipts may grow heavier, with every passing season.

Don't Be a Knocker.

If there's any chance to boom business, boom it. Don't be a knocker. Don't put on a long face, but hope a bit. When a stranger drops in, jolly him. Tell him this is the greatest town on earth. It is. Don't get muleish. Don't roast. Just jolly. All men like to be jollied always. Push your friends with you. Soon you'll have a whole procession. Be a good fellow.

No man ever helped himself by knocking other people down. No man ever got rich trying to make people believe he was the only good man on earth. You can't climb the ladder of fame by stepping on other people's corns.

All men are not alike. Once in a while you will find one who is very much alike. But some are different. You're not the only one. If you don't like their style let 'em alone. Don't knock, but make yourself look pleasant. You'll get used to it. There's no end of fun in minding your own business. And it makes other people like you better. Better have others stuck on you than get stuck on yourself. Nobody gets stuck on a knocker. Don't be one. Or two.—[Exchange.

A Bad Wrench.

Mrs. Abbie McKeen had a very serious accident, July 15. She slipped and fell striking her left wrist so as to dislocate it and tear and wrench the ligaments and cords in a very serious manner. She is unable to use her hand in any way. Her physician thinks it will be a long time before she can do any work with it.

Bert Wilson is at Waterford, haying.

C. D. Brooks and family have returned to Boston.

Mrs. C. A. Garcelon has gone to Chicago for a while.

George Goldsmith, who has been so ill, is some better.

Willis McAllister has sold his farm to G. M. and F. L. Harriman.

Mary Hill is at work for Mrs. Charles Bartlett at East Stoneham.

O. E. McAllister of Waterford called on friends here, last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Davis of Lovell were at G. M. Harriman's last week Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McAllister and two grandchildren visited at Bert Palmer's, last week.

Mrs. Mertie Stearns and daughter and Gertrude Butters of Millinocket are visiting relatives here.

The cold wind of July 26 and 27 did serious injury to the crops in this locality. In some places the bean leaves and cucumber vines looked as if struck by frost and many apple trees were blown down, others had limbs broken off and the ground under them covered with unripe apples. A pity as the apple crop was small any way.

PIGEON HILL.

F. D. True entertained guests from Poland Spring, Sunday.

Mrs. F. L. Waterman of Mechanic Falls is boarding at J. H. King's.

Elmer Gross and family of Mechanic Falls are camping at Hogan lake.

H. H. Hall and son, William Hall, of Oxford called on friends here, last Sunday.

A "catching time" for haying, but farmers are getting more than they expected.

At Whitney lake, the Caldwell cottages full and several tents occupied. The summer school is not held there this season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. March and family, with Mrs. Eliza Daicy of Auburn, spent Sunday with Mrs. March's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Denning.

Fish Hatchery Located.

Fish Commissioners Ring and Stanley have located the new State fish hatchery at the outlet stream of Rangeley Lake just below the dam. The entire appropriation of $6,000 will be expended in a large hatchery to be completed at once, work beginning next Monday. The Union Power Co., who own the land in the vicinity, have given the State two acres and permission to run necessary pipes through their dam. The temperature of the water taken at several places was 61 degrees, which was considered exceptionally favorable for trout, although salmon can be raised in warmer waters. The building will be 25½ by 50 feet, two stories high. The ground floor will be devoted to the hatchery, and the upper floor to a tenement, office and workshop.

Grange Field Meeting.

The State Grange field meeting for Oxford county will be held at Bryant's Pond on the 10th day of August.

The speakers for the day will include Hon. N. J. Bachelder, Governor of New Hampshire; Hon. O. Gardner, Master of Maine State Grange; Prof. W. J. Thompson, Lecturer of Maine State Grange; Prof. A. E. Rogers of the University of Maine and others. Reduced fares on railroads. Basket dinner. Let all Patrons and their friends rally to this meeting.

Gilbertville boasts of a dog that has contracted the spruce gum habit. He keeps a "chew" in his mouth several hours, chewing it like any two-legged "kid."

Hon. M. E. Ingalls, president of the Big Four railroad system, recently a candidate for Mayor of Cincinnati, has written to Mayor Boothby of Portland accepting the invitation to be present on the evening of Aug. 12, when the Old Home Week exercises will be carried out in City Hall. Mr. Ingalls is one of Maine's illustrious sons who have made fame and fortune for themselves in other states and will be welcomed with much enthusiasm on his visit here without doubt. He is a native of Harrison, some forty miles from Portland.

Maine is just getting down to "a first reading" of its new caucus law. It applies to towns of over 2,000 population and cities under 35,000. Unless a man registers his party preference with the town clerk or is registered by his town or city committee, he cannot participate in the party primaries. One may change his enrolment but thereafter he must wait six months before participating in a caucus. Enrolment is with the town clerk; the record is open to everybody. Seven days' public notice of caucus is required. The town committee is empowered to make the enrolment in bulk where individuals fail. If both the individual and the committee fail the voter loses his status as to the party primaries.

The Value Is Inside.

The man who feeds green clover, green bone, sound grain, fresh vegetables and pure water and provides clean working and living room for the hens will have no trouble about the quality of his eggs, be the shells white, pink or dark brown, says Maine Farmer. Value is inside the shell, not in the coloring matter which enters into its composition.

But They're Hard to Cut.

A writer in Country Gentleman in reference to green bone says: "We prefer the ribs of beef, chopped in two inch pieces and packed in the feeder nicely. It takes but a few minutes of hand labor to reduce them to the proper size and condition for feeding, so perfectly are the cutting knives adjusted."

The Saco's Reputation.

"One cannot walk along the banks of the Saco river these days, without observing how the current is gullying out and eating into the high banks on one side, taking away rod after rod of meadow land, and widening the field on the other side, by a more extended area of useless pebbly surface, a most unsatisfactory state of affairs, when the river forms, as in many cases, the line between two farms," says Listener in the Boston Transcript.

This assertion is a bit too sweeping. If the pedestrian does his walking in the towns of Conway and Fryeburg, and at certain points in Brownfield and Hiram, he will find many indications that this river has a disposition to get out of the beaten track and wander around in new channels, but this is only done at times when it is full and in an effort to straighten itself out in its bed. In times of high water on the intervals along the upper stretches of the Saco a man's hold-fast acres are so largely in imagination and the farmer who owns land on the west shore when he goes to bed at night may wake in the morning to find that while he slept the river had been accessory to the involuntary theft of a potato patch or cornfield by some farmer on the east shore.

But for a large part of its journey the Saco beats or ripples against the same rocky banks that have marked its channel to the sea since the day after the morning stars sang together. It is wrong to give the Saco the reputation of living a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde sort of life, for those who know it best are ready to testify that, on the whole, it behaves as well as any river in New England. It has had its sprees in the past, and has scattered oats, to say nothing of corn, beans and potatoes, but of late years it has achieved wonders in living down the reputation acquired in its younger days.

Several Ways of Cooking Chicken.

Boiled—An old chicken is best for boiling. Put a quart of water into a kettle and when it boils, put in a clean and trussed fowl. Add a large onion with half a dozen cloves stuck in it, a bay leaf, a bunch of sweet herbs, and a little salt and pepper. When done, lift out and drain carefully. Strain the broth in the kettle, thicken with flour, add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and any other seasoning liked, pour over the chicken and serve at once. Garnish with slices of fried bacon.

Stuffed—Boil small onions in milk till nearly tender, and stuff a cleaned chicken with them. Boil, add minced, boiled onions to the sauce, pour over, sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve at once.

Soubise Chicken—Take a young, fat chicken and prepare for boiling. Cook in a buttered saucepan with a pint of white stock for an hour, seasoning with salt and pepper to taste. Add a pound of button onions, peeled, and cook half an hour longer, turning the chicken occasionally. At serving time, put the chicken in a deep platter and strain the sauce over it. Make a ring of the boiled onions around the chicken, alternating with small squares of bacon fried to a crisp, and garnishing the whole with parsley of the white heart leaves of lettuce.

With Rice—Prepare for boiling and boil fifteen minutes. Then add an onion stuck with six cloves, pepper and salt and a bunch of sweet herbs. When the onion is cooked to pieces, take it out and add a cupful of well-washed rice. Cook till the rice is tender, and pour the whole around the chicken.

A la Printaniere—Prepare as for boiling and fry whole in a stewpan with half a pound of bacon chopped fine. Scald another half-pound of bacon, cut it into small squares and add it to the chicken, together with four small carrots and four small onions cut fine. Season with salt and pepper and add a cupful of stock, milk or water, if needed to moisten. Cover the pan tightly and finish cooking in the oven. Make a white sauce, using the strained dripping from the chicken, and add to it a cupful of cooked or canned peas.

Broiled—Clean and singe a tender chicken and split it down the back. Break the joints, take out the breast bone, wipe clean, sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub with soft butter. Broil over a clear fire and serve with melted butter.

Broiled with Bacon—Prepare as above, rubbing the chicken with salt, pepper, and either olive oil or bacon fat. Broil as usual, serve on toast, sprinkle with lemon juice and chopped parsley, and garnish liberally with rashers of fried bacon.

A la Waldorf—Cut fine the remnants of a cold roast chicken. Blend one tablespoonful of butter with two of flour, add a few chopped sweet herbs and half a cupful of canned mushrooms cut fine. Add a cupful of white wine and a cupful of chicken stock, milk or water. When the sauce is done, add the chicken and cook slowly for fifteen minutes. Serve on toast, or in a deep platter garnished with toast points. A sprinkle of chopped parsley is an improvement.

Croquettes—Use the remnants of cold boiled or roast chicken. Chopped mushrooms, cold cooked veal, sweetbreads, calf's brains, or cold boiled rice may be added if the quantity is not sufficient. Bind with a raw egg, or more if needed, and season to taste. Shape into croquettes, dip in egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat and serve with any preferred sauce. This is a favorite dish for luncheons, when either sweetbreads, brains or mushrooms are added to the chicken. French peas are useful for a garnish.

Custard—Use one cupful each of strong chicken stock and cream. Thicken with the yolks of three eggs, well beaten. Cook over hot water till the mixture thickens a little. Season with salt, pepper, and grated nutmeg, pour into custard cups and serve very cold.

Curried—Cut up a chicken and put it into a kettle of boiling water. Season with salt, pepper, a bunch of sweet herbs, six small onions, three cloves and a grating of nutmeg. Boil 45 minutes or more, skimming as needed. Make a sauce of one tablespoonful of butter, two of flour, and the liquor the chicken was boiled in. Mix a level tablespoonful of curry powder with the well beaten yolks of four eggs, the juice of half a lemon and a little of the grated peel. Mix a little of the sauce with the egg mixture and add it slowly to the contents of the kettle. Put the chicken into a deep platter, pour the sauce over over it, and garnish with a border of boiled rice.—[Brown Book.

Lifetime Work of the Heart.

The human heart is practically a force pump about six inches in length and four inches in diameter. It beats 70 times per minute, 4,200 times per hour, 100,800 times per day, 36,792,000 times per year, and 2,575,440,000 times in seventy years, which is "man's appointed three score years and ten." At each of these beats it forces 2½ ounces of blood through the system, 175 ounces per minute, 656¼ pounds per hour, 7½ tons per day.

All the blood of the body, which is about thirty pounds, passes through the heart every three minutes. This little organ pumps every day what is equal to lifting 122 tons one foot high, or one ton 122 feet high—that is, one ton to the top of a forty-yard mill chimney, or sixteen persons weighing 125 pounds each to the same height. During the seventy years of a man's life, this marvelous little pump, without a single moment's rest, night or day, discharges the enormous quantity of 178,850 tons of blood.

In the burning of the Sea View House at Old Orchard, Mrs. E. D. Hooper of Paris came down from the top story and sank unconscious on a sofa on the second floor. She was found by the firemen and taken out through one of the second story windows.

Cure For Hay Fever.

Frank Kimball Says Hyomei Will Give Relief—Sold Under Guarantee.

The season for hay fever is almost at hand and many people feel that they will be obliged to leave town in order to avoid the sneezing, watery eyes and other annoying symptoms of this disagreeable summer disease.

Frank Kimball wishes us to announce that when Hyomei is used, either as a preventive or cure, there will be no hay fever. He advises the use of Hyomei daily for two or three weeks before the usual time for the annual appearance of hay fever. In this way the attack will be prevented. If, however, the preventive treatment was not started soon enough and the disease comes on, use Hyomei six or seven times daily and also rub Hyomei Balm thoroughly into the nostrils both morning and night. This treatment will relieve at once and give a speedy and permanent cure.

Hyomei actually brings into your own home, a climate filled with ozone and healing balsams, the same air that one breathes at the White Mountains or other health resorts.

There is no stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is Nature's own method for curing all diseases of the respiratory organs, and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that accompanies every outfit, so that the medicated air reaches the minutest air cells, killing all germs and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

It is the one treatment for hay fever where Frank Kimball guarantees to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. All who are subject to hay fever should begin its use at once so as to prevent the disease.

The Grand Trunk Pacific.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced to Parliament, today, the details of the contract between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government for the building of a national transcontinental railway. The road will stretch from Moncton, N. B., to Port Simpson on the Pacific ocean, a distance of 3,800 miles.

The government will build with public moneys the lines from Moncton to Winnipeg and lease the line to the company for 50 years. For seven years the line will be free, the company paying operating expenses. The next three years the company will pay over all net earnings. For the remainder of the life of the lease the company will pay the government 3 per cent. on the gross cost of the section. The government will supervise the building of the line, but the company probably will do the work. From Winnipeg to the Pacific the company must build the line within seven years.

The government will guarantee 75 per cent. of the cost of construction up to $13,000 a mile on the prarie section and $30,000 a mile on the mountain section. The government will hold a first mortgage on the line between Winnipeg and the Pacific as security of its guarantee, and the Grand Trunk Railway will guarantee the bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific for its proportion of the cost of the section.

The company will have running privileges over the Intercolonial. All companies will have running privileges between Moncton and Winnipeg, subject to the company's terms. Unrouted traffic in the winter must go to St. John and Halifax at Portland rates. The company must deposit in 60 days $5,000,000 as security for the fulfillment of the contract. The money will be released for the building of the final section.

Sir Wilfred Laurier spoke at length in explanation of the project. He said the road would be built through the maritime provinces, that a Canadian port be opened on the seaboard to render Canada independent should the United States at any time stop the bonding privileges. The best way, he said, to remain friendly with the United States is to be in dependent commercially.

We, the undersigned, believing Dr. SETH ARNOLD'S BALSAM to be a reliable Remedy for Bowel Complaints, hereby guarantee a twenty-five cent bottle to give satisfaction or money refunded. Frank Kimball, Norway.

The Egg.

During the hot weather, people of good judgment will eat but little meat. The juicy roast of pork, beef or lamb, which was so tempting and so desirable in cool weather, is too hearty for the warm days. More fruit should now be eaten, also cereals. Eggs are a good substitute for meat. In fact, eggs are about as perfect food as we can obtain. That is to say, they contain all the ingredients necessary to sustain life and develop the organism. Did you ever think that the chicken just hatched is nothing but an animated egg? The bones, muscles, nerves, feathers and claws were all formed out of the ingredients of the egg and nothing else.

Sick persons are often fed on eggs because these digest very easily. The difficulty with them is that they are not palatable and it is hard to get a patient to swallow them for any length of time. The flavor of the egg may be disguised, however. The egg should be "strictly fresh," and it should be so perfectly beaten that it can be dipped up in a spoon. The egg in this condition may be flavored with the juice of some favorite fruit, or it may be added to the juice of some other liquid food, as milk or broth. Experiments have shown that eggs cooked at a low degree of heat are more easily digested than those cooked quickly at a very high temperature.

Effect of Flowers.

If you stop to think of it, there is a certain relation between the flowers that grow in pots in your window and your own spirits. Whether unconsciously or not, you are affected in no small degree by the blossoms and their state of prosperity. If the flowers come out and bloom as they should bloom, you are correspondingly elated. The sight of them tranquilizes the nerves. The odor soothes the temper. The very presence of the cheerful growing thing makes you content with the earth and your lot upon it. And this is felt not only by you, but by every other woman.

Have you not among your acquaintances some dear, good, kind soul who revels in her window garden? In the winter it is filled with roses, when all other windows stare bleak and bare into the sullen streets. In the summer it is twice as gay and the woman who attends the garden spot is found perpetually hovering over the beds. By what has always been considered a happy chance, the woman who revels in the garden is a creature of gentle soul, always cheerful, always kind hearted, ever charitable and endowed with every virtue from the beginning to the end of the charter.

And now the beauty specialist comes along and declares that it is the influence of flowers that brings this all about, and that all who would enjoy tranquility and cheerfulness must cultivate plants. But it is not every woman who can cultivate plants. Lack of space is one drawback, for, in the crowded limits of the city, it is not every house that can have so much as a window garden. The window is in too much demand to be spared for gardening purposes. But the city woman, the beauty specialists declare, can always buy a rose, or a carnation or an Easter lily or a bunch of violets, and she can inhale the fragrance and benefit by it.

There are all sorts of scents, and each has its own influence upon the mind, just as there are all kinds of medicines, each with its own purpose in an anatomy of the human body. The rose, for for instance, is just the thing to promote good temper. The odor of the rose drives away nervous headaches, and rose water, highly scented with rose, is a recognized remedy for this ill.

The rose also allays nervousness, for its odor is very penetrating, and having cured the nerves of the head so that it gets in its good work upon the other nerves of the body. Gradually one becomes soothed and tranquilized. The woman who is subject to nervous attacks should never be without a rose in her bosom, in her hair or in her hand; she should always have it where she can see it and enjoy its invigorating influence upon the nerves.

Suggestions to Girls for Summer Work.

To begin with, girls, no matter how jolly a summer you expect to have and no matter how much you are looking forward to a generous period of loafing when school is over for the season, depend upon it, all play and no work never is a success. Don't think it is the preaching of people who are too old to have a good time—it is a serious fact that you will be happier if you have some duties. And all this side from any question of your duty to mother and father and home.

Making beds and sweeping may not be quite so amusing as playing tennis or golf, but it is about as good exercise. It is, in fact, much better for some girls, for whom the outdoor games are entirely too violent. And the fact that no other exercise develops the figure so symmetrically as does housework should recommend it to most young women.

The care of the flowers that go so far to make the home charming during the summer months should be the duty of the young girls of the family, and, in places where lamps are used, the tending—filling and cleaning—is one of the little every-day bits of business that takes only a few minutes.

Aside from some regular every-day duty, undertaken as a matter of discipline and unselfishness, it is a very good idea to start the vacation time with some definite plan for work to be accomplished. A supply of dainty underclothing may easily be gotten together in a two or three months' vacation if a few hours each day are spent on pretty hand sewing. Little hemstitched ruffles and feathered-stitched bands are considered more correct than fancy embroidery and lace, and they cost infinitely less in money.

One class of girls who are just undergoing their final examinations at high school have made a plan to see who can do the prettiest hand sewing this summer. They will meet each week for an afternoon's work and a chat and a glass of iced tea, and at each meeting dues of ten cents are to be paid in by each member. At the end of the summer there is to be a formal judging time, when the class teacher will pass on the work of the vacation, and by her decision will be awarded a prize of the prettiest handkerchief that can be bought with the money paid in dues.

Like the good, old-fashioned foreign girls, many girls, many young women are sensible enough to begin while they are still school girls preparing for their possible future home. They buy occasionally, some fine linen, and make it ready for household use, with their initials embroidered on it. Then, when Prince Charming comes into the story, there is a goodly store of useful things ready for the trosseau. Pretty summer work with dreams of a rosy future woven into stitches!

The Coon.

The trail of the coon is the coldest of any known animal. To follow it requires a dog with the finest kind of nose and superior intelligence, and trained to the work. Besides the difficulty of its trail, the coon has many maneuvers and tricks to confuse both the hunter and dog.

He will frequently run up a tree and to the extremity of its longest limb, from which he will leap as far as possible, landing far off the line of the old trail, and then speed away in a new one, by devious courses through the darkness. This ruse is a puzzler to even the best dogs, and a dog must know coons and their ways well to be equal to it and the many others the cunning and resourceful little beast has ever at command.

When a coon is brought to bay in a tree, the genuine coon dog announces the fact to the hunter by a different bark or yelp from the one he used on the trail. Some dogs do not give tongue at all while on the chase, but reserve their cry for the signal that the game has been treed.

The strong eat well, sleep well, look well. The weak don't. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the weak strong.

Correspondence School.

Much disappointment may be spared at the outset if the public can be made to distinguish between what a correspondence school can do, and what in the nature of the case is an impossibility. It can correct written exercises, but it cannot teach a modern language, because the pronunciation cannot be imparted by mail or by any substitute for viva voce converse. It can correct harmony exercises, but it cannot make a pianist or a violinist, or a singer, because in all these things the example and criticism of the living teacher is indispensable. It can criticise literary efforts, but it cannot make short story writers, because no system of education has yet done that.

There are some things that it can do just as well as a teacher on the spot, some things that it can do tolerably well, and some things that it cannot do at all. Any school that advertises impossibilities sets itself down at once as a fraud, and at the best it must be clearly understood that an education by mail is carried on under difficulties and is an unsatisfactory substitute for the real thing.

To the energetic person who is resolved to succeed, and who lacks teachers, such a help may be of priceless value. Those who accept such a cheap substitute when by a little sacrifice they they could attend a good school and secure the advantage of a personal association with teachers and student companions, are doing themselves a foolish injury.

The worst wrong of all is inflicted upon unsophisticated people in remote farms and villages, who are led to believe that with ordinary talents a difficult profession or art may be mastered in a few lessons for the sum of $30, a sum which often means real hardship to people struggling with poverty and blindly seeking a way out. The correspondence school has its place and seemingly has come to stay, but there is a great need for some source of authoritative information which may make imposture impossible. The ideal plan would be to have such work put under the sanction of the universities and thus raised above the reach of reproach.—[Springfield Republican.

Dairy Notes.

Everything points to a time when we will need corn or some kind of green feed to help out the pastures this fall. Nine times out of ten, the man who provides feed of this kind is glad afterward that he did.

It will not pay the dairyman any better to swear at the cow and abuse her than it would to treat his wife and family in the same way. It does not improve the quantity and quality of the milk in the one, nor the temper and happiness of the other.

The man who carries an open strainer pail into the stable while he is milking is mistaken if he thinks the fine particles of dust and other matter of a worse nature ever will strain out. They will not, no matter how fine may be the mesh of his strainer or how many thicknesses of cloth he may use.

Do not think that because you have a windmill that it is all that is necessary to insure plenty of water for your yard. The wind may not blow, and no wind, no water. Watch the wind as well as the mill. You may need to go back to first principles and do a little old-fashioned pumping yourself. Better do it than to have the cows go thirsty.

Some men still argue that it is useless to salt cows when in milk. Does not the cow herself settle the matter? Would she eat salt unless she needed it? We need not starve them a week and then allow them to overdo the matter. Regular salting, however, is the true way to furnish the cows an element which seems to be lacking otherwise in their makeup. Like the deer in olden times, cows will travel a long way sometimes to get salt.

The practice of milking out of doors in an open yard is not nearly so common as it used to be. But after all, it is fine to have the stables so built that they may be cool and bright while milking. With this end in view, some have sheds built on purpose for summer milking, open on the front and in the rear, with windows which may be closed in case of heavy winds or storms. This comes next to open air milking, and in some ways has advantages over the old way.

Mere Opinion.

A man hates to be caught looking at himself in a mirror. Women are seldom caught doing anything else.

When a woman feels that it is necessary to cut down expenses, she wants to begin by getting her husband to wear cheaper clothes.

Many a man would be discouraged if he knew how homely his wife appears to some of the rest.

The man who does his work just to get it done is generally kept pretty busy wondering why they don't raise his salary.

Virtue always wastes valuable time when she gets to bothering over what Vice thinks of her.

No girl ever permitted a man to hold her hand expecting him to stop at that.

Her Proposal Turned Down.

There is a small town up the State that boasts a female preacher, and the lady's duties are many. One day she may visit the sick, another attend a funeral, and the next baptize a baby. One afternoon she was preparing a sermon for the following Sunday when she heard a timid knock at the parsonage door. Answering the summons she found a bashful German standing on the step and twirling his straw hat in his hands.

"Good afternoon," the preacheress remarked. "What do you wish?"

"Dey say der minister lifed in dis hous, hey?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yess? Vell, I vant to me kit marriet."

"All right; I can marry you," she said.

The lady's hair is beginning to silver, and the German glanced at it. Then he jammed his hat on his head and hurried down the walk. "What's the matter?" she cried after him.

"You gits no chance mit me," he called back. "I don't vant you; I haf got me a girl alreaty!"

Bears Killing Sheep.

Farmers are yarding their sheep at night as bears are killing many.

Look After the Rolling Stones.

We would suggest that the road commissioners and their deputies look to the principal highways and at least in a measure remove the loose stones which are both disagreeable and dangerous. This duty as made and provided by statutes seems to have been quite overlooked.

Charles Gammon has moved to the Nevers place on Hemlock hill.

P. H. Rolfe and wife have returned from Appleton, where they have been enjoying a rest and outing.

The town is overwhelmed with company. Hotels and private houses are filled with visitors and summer boarders.

Rolfe Bros. intend soon resuming the manufacture of dowels and putting in a Weymouth lathe for shaping their small stock into novelties.

Farmers are in the midst of haying and indications are they have lost nothing by waiting and dull weather, all being agreeably surprised at the big yield and quality.

Ernest Davis of North Harrison, who had his jaw broken two weeks ago by the kick of a horse while haying at Temple Hill, has so far recovered as to resume his duties as mail distributer. The horse was highly valued and a family pet, not vicious but frantic with pain, and died the same day the accident occurred.
